

MANAGING YOUR DIGITAL LEGACY

Keeping Track of Important
Digital Assets and Accounts

A guide by  safelyfiled

It used to be that you only had to consider leaving behind physical items and intangible assets (like bank accounts) when you died. But now, you also have to think about your digital assets and online presence.

This is new. But if you think about it, you'll realize that more and more of your assets are in digital form; music, movies and books that you've purchased rights to, digital records that prove ownership, warranty or other information. And how about this thought? What happens to your Facebook, LinkedIn, Google+, Email account, Blog page and the like when you go? Ever had a friend or family member pass away and yet you still see their presence on those social media sites? Ever wonder how those accounts will be handled and when? Sensitive information is often associated with those accounts so leaving them open could be a risk for others in the family.

This checklist may not only be handy for when you're gone, but also as an up-to-date reminder to yourself of all your digital accounts. Review this checklist periodically to keep it current and as a reminder to close down some accounts that you are no longer using.

The financial consequences of failing to keep your documents in order can be significant. According to the National Association of Unclaimed Property Administrators, state treasurers currently hold $32.9 billion in unclaimed bank accounts and other assets. And if you include unclaimed pension benefits and life insurance proceeds, the number climbs to $58 billion.

Many law firms now are also encouraging people to keep their digital legacy in mind and cover those assets in their will. SafelyFiled can help you with your digital legacy.

Managing Your Digital Legacy Checklist

Use this checklist to help you think about and record the necessary information pertaining to your digital assets and account information. Download this checklist and fill it out. After you've recorded the information on this checklist, upload it into your SafelyFiled account and share this document with whomever may need it when necessary. This checklist, like all of the other documents loaded into SafelyFiled, will be stored encrypted and kept safe from hackers and viruses. This is important, as the information you record here is extremely sensitive. Do not email this completed checklist. Upload it directly into your SafelyFiled account via computer or the Android or iPhone Apps. You might also want to set a reminder on this file after you upload it to remind yourself to update it periodically so it's kept up-to-date.

If you don't have a SafelyFiled account or don't want to put this checklist in your account, you may decide to print it. If you do, make sure you keep it in a very safe place like a safe deposit box.

Finally, don't forget that your computer hard drive is subject to spyware, so make sure you delete the copy on your computer/phone/tablet after you've uploaded or printed it.

Password Vault Info

If you use a password vault such as LastPass.com, you may want to record your vault info here. Password vaults are a great way to track all of your online accounts and login information with one master password. If you ever lose the master password for that vault, you will have to start from scratch, as most password vault companies, for extra security purposes, will not store your master password for you. If you use a vault, this may be the only info you need to record on this checklist other than credit card numbers and specific digital assets.

| Vault Name | Website | Login Name | Password |
|-------------------|--------------|------------|----------|
| Example: Lastpass | Lastpass.com | | |

| Media Type | Web address | Login Name | Password | Instructions/ Comments |
|----------------------|--------------------------|------------|----------|--|
